

Impact of U.S. congressional shift in control on the Biden climate change and environmental agenda

January 19, 2021 | Client Update

We've considered the options that a Biden administration may have to effect its environmental and climate change policies now that the Democrats will have control of Congress for the next two years. This deck lays them out: legislative options and challenges in light of their bare majority, ability for the Biden administration to roll-back certain of the current administration's environmental and climate change regulations with the support of Congress and our insights on Biden's nominees and how they may impact environmental and climate change policy.

These options supplement the Biden administration's ability to further its policy agenda through regulation, enforcement and other executive actions discussed in our November 2020 deck available

here

If you have any questions regarding the matters covered in this publication, please reach out to any of the lawyers listed below or your usual Davis Polk contact.

Michael Comstock

+1 212 450 4374

michael.comstock@davispolk.com

David A. Zilberberg

+1 212 450 4688

david.zilberberg@davispolk.com

This communication, which we believe may be of interest to our clients and friends of the firm, is for general information only. It is not a full analysis of the matters presented and should not be relied upon as legal advice. This may be considered attorney advertising in some jurisdictions. Please refer to the firm's privacy notice for further details.

Related materials

Read the full update