Quicker to Market? U.S. House of Representatives Passes the Jumpstart Our Business Startups Act

March 9, 2012 | Client Update

A number of recent studies have noted a substantial decrease in IPOs by smaller companies and a perceived lack of hospitality to smaller companies in the public markets. Commentators have pointed to a number of factors, including Sarbanes-Oxley compliance costs, lack of research coverage and the prospect of lower trading profits for intermediaries resulting from structural market changes over the last several years.
