

The 2023 outlook for crypto legislation: What's in and what's missing from current proposals

January 26, 2023 | Articles & Books

Davis Polk counsel Daniel Newman and associate Justin Levine recently authored “The 2023 outlook for crypto legislation: What’s in and what’s missing from current proposals,” in Financial Markets Association’s Market Solutions. The piece discusses the practical significance of four of the leading legislative proposals for cryptocurrency regulation and flags two key topics that are inadequately addressed by those proposals: questions related to crypto assets’ classification as a security and their custody.

Read the article