Chamber Declines to Litigate Pay Ratio Rules

October 21, 2015 | Client Update

The WSJ reported that the U.S. Chamber of Commerce will not be challenging the SEC pay ratio disclosure rules in court. Our memo on the final rules is here.

According to the article, the Chamber noted that the rule is not effective until 2018. The political landscape surrounding the rule could change after the 2016 elections. There have already been several Congressional efforts to repeal the rule.

The Chamber intends to continue focusing on the conflict minerals litigation.
