

Are Banking Regulators Special?

March 1, 2018 | Articles & Books

Davis Polk partner Margaret Tahyar recently authored “Are Banking Regulators Special?” for The Clearing House’s Banking Perspectives magazine. The article discusses how federal banking regulators operate in a cultural mindset different from other financial sector agencies and the larger administrative state, and how the two contradictory traditions need to find a new balance in favor of more transparency, accountability, and the rule of law.

Read the full article>