

China's Draft Data Security Law Published for Public Consultation

July 20, 2020 | Client Update

On July 3, 2020, the Standing Committee of China's National People's Congress released the first draft of the Data Security Law of the People's Republic of China ("Draft Law"). The Draft Law is currently in public consultation and is expected to be enacted by the end of 2020. The Client Alert identifies the Draft Law's key provisions, and considers the implications of the Draft Law in light of other recently enacted or amended legislation concerning national security, data control, and state secret.

Viewed in this context, the Draft Law is an important new piece in a series of laws geared towards safeguarding national security and asserting sovereignty and which may cause additional restrictions on information flow out of China.

If you have any questions regarding the matters covered in this publication, please reach out to any of the lawyers listed below or your usual Davis Polk contact.

Martin Rogers

+852 2533 3307
martin.rogers@davispolk.com

Yuan Zheng

+852 2533 1007
yuan.zheng@davispolk.com

This communication, which we believe may be of interest to our clients and friends of the firm, is for general information only. It is not a full analysis of the matters presented and should not be relied upon as legal advice. This may be considered attorney advertising in some jurisdictions. Please refer to the firm's privacy notice for further details.

Related materials

Read the full update