

Important Third Circuit Decision Finds a Lender and Contractual Counterparty to Be a Non-statutory "Insider"

February 6, 2009 | Client Update

In a decision issued on February 3, 2009, the Third Circuit considered an issue of first impression: when will a creditor be considered a non-statutory insider for purposes of extending the time for recovery of preferential payments. The Court held that a creditor was a non-statutory insider where it had "an ability to coerce" (and did coerce) the debtor into various transactions, including transactions that were not in the debtor's best interest. The creditor was held to be an insider based on "domination," rather than the more typical "actual control" test, and the one-year (rather than ninety-day) lookback period for the avoidance of preferential transfers applied.

If you have any questions regarding the matters covered in this publication, please reach out to any of the lawyers listed below or your usual Davis Polk contact.

Lauren F. Bedell

+1 212 450 4167
lauren.bedell@davispolk.com

Donald S. Bernstein

+1 212 450 4092
donald.bernstein@davispolk.com

John Fouhey

+1 212 450 4358
john.fouhey@davispolk.com

Ben Kaminetzky

+1 212 450 4259
ben.kaminetzky@davispolk.com

Karen E. Wagner

+1 212 450 4404
karen.wagner@davispolk.com

This communication, which we believe may be of interest to our clients and friends of the firm, is for general information only. It is not a full analysis of the matters presented and should not be relied upon as legal advice. This may be considered attorney advertising in some jurisdictions. Please refer to the firm's privacy notice for further details.

Related materials

Read the full update